

The Spiderwick Chronicles

by Tony DiTerlizzi and Holly Black

I read this whole series a couple weeks ago and really enjoyed it! Three siblings, Jared, Simon, and Mallory, move into an old, run down house with their mom. Not only do they find hidden rooms, they also discover all sorts of magical creatures! Some are nice, some, well, they're not so nice...

My First Russian Phrases

by Jill Kalz

This book will teach you how to say all kinds of Russian phrases, like "I don't like strawberry ice cream!" It also features cute illustrations, a guide to pronouncing the tricky Cyrillic alphabet, and a list of other books the interested Russian learner can look at for more information. Although this is a kid's book, it's great for all ages interested to add a few useful foreign phrases to their vocabulary!

Red Light, Green Light

by Margaret Wise Brown, illustrated by Leonard Weisgard

This very original book by the author of the famous and beloved "Goodnight Moon" is all about a traffic light in a small town, and how it helps people and animals go about their day. The text is simple and certain phrases repeat a lot, but always with a new twist! The illustrations are great. done in a bold and charming 1950s style with, of course, a lot of green and red!
