Abstract: The Edward W. Vernon papers contain materials accumulated by Ed Vernon during his research for two history books he authored on Baja California missions and maritime history. The materials include correspondence, research notes, field notes, photographic materials, maps, site plans, journals, secondary materials, and digital assets. Ed Vernon was a successful entrepreneur, engineer, and Southern California native. He served during World War II and later founded Development Associates in Goleta, California, where he and his colleagues developed the first dollar bill changer. Following his retirement in 1996, Vernon traveled extensively in Baja California where he conducted field research on the missions and maritime history of the peninsula. From that research he authored two books; Las Misiones Antiguas, The Spanish Missions of Baja California, and A Maritime History of Baja California.

Language of Material: While primarily in English, some materials are in Spanish.

Scope and Contents

The Edward W. Vernon papers contain materials accumulated by Ed Vernon during his research for two history books he authored on Baja California missions and maritime history.

The materials include correspondence, research notes, field notes, photographic materials, maps, site plans, journals, secondary materials, and digital assets.

Biographical / Historical

Edward W. Vernon was a successful entrepreneur, engineer, and Southern California native. He served during World War II and later founded Development Associates in Goleta, California, where he and his colleagues developed the first dollar bill changer. Following his retirement in 1996, Vernon traveled extensively in Baja California where he conducted field research on the missions and maritime history of the peninsula. From that research he authored two books; Las Misiones Antiguas, The Spanish Missions of Baja California, and A Maritime History of Baja California.

Edward Wood Vernon was born on December 8, 1926, in Temple City, California. He enlisted in the Navy and served during World War II.

After the war, Vernon attended Pasadena Junior College and the University of Southern California (USC), graduating with a degree in mechanical engineering. In 1947, while working on his degree, he married Barbara Lee Vernon. Together they had three children.

Vernon's first job out of college was with General Electric (GE) where he worked in various capacities. The Vernons moved from California to various spots in the Midwest and east during his employment with GE. They returned to California where Vernon worked for Circle Seal. Later, Vernon founded Development Associates in Goleta, California, where he and his colleagues developed the first dollar bill changer.

In 1964, Vernon established Development Associates Controls (D.A.C.) in Santa Barbara, a machine tool manufacturing company, specializing in drills and programmers for the printed circuit board industry. By the late 1980s, DAC had become one of the world's leading and most innovative suppliers in this field, and has continued in this role to the present.

After his retirement in 1996, Vernon traveled extensively in Baja California, researching, and writing two books: Las Misiones Antiguas, The Spanish Missions of Baja California, and A Maritime History of Baja California.

According to his obituary, Edward Vernon was known as an intelligent, adventurous man with a positive outlook. He was a man who loved and supported his family. Vernon was active in many organizations in Santa Barbara including the Santa Barbara Yacht Club, Vistas and the Santa Barbara Trust for Historic Preservation. He passed away on February 1, 2016 at age 89.
