Ancient Egyptians: Objects from Daily Life. The daily life of ordinary Egyptians investigated through objects. The Egyptians used oil lamps to light their homes. They would pour oil into a central hole in the lamp, which would then sit in a store in the bowl. A piece of string or linen would then be dipped into the oil and this would soak up the oil and light, producing a steady flame like a candle. Then people could hold the lamp without burning themselves and place it in a lamp holder or a hook on the wall. Ancient Egyptian Oil Lamp. Decorative Tile. Egyptian faience is a ceramic material which creates bright colours. Photograph 2 shows a faience flowered tile. This sort of tile would have been found

Family was important in ancient Egypt, and family life began early for the ancient Egyptians. Men and women both tended to marry young, and most marriages were polygamous with the husband having several wives. The husband usually had a senior or chief wife who was considered higher than the other ones. Although divorce existed in ancient Egypt, it was rare because of the Egyptians' commitment to the sanctity of the family unit. Children. Children were also an important part of the family unit. Their primary responsibilities were still to overseeing the duties of the home, such as raising the children and preparing meals for the family. Role of Men. Men, on the other hand, worked the fields to earn their family a living and raise them crops to eat.
